SAVANNAH, GA -- Hinterland is a show by Andrew K. Shepherd on view May 15th through May 16th, 2021 at Cleo the Gallery at 2204 Skidaway Rd. In lieu of a physical reception, Shepherd will be sitting down for a conversation with Bethani Blake on Instagram Live at 5:30pm EST on May 15. Hinterland explores the places in the periphery of influence of popular culture, places that are capable of receiving but not necessarily influencing. Shepherd is making a physical language for his experience of the world using paintings and objects, and this show acts as a record of Shepherd's work in this space so far. This event is free and open to the public.

Andrew K. Shepherd was born in Las Vegas, NV in 1999. He will be receiving a BFA in Painting from the Savannah College of Art and Design in Savannah, GA this spring. Maturing alongside the internet, in the suburbs of Las Vegas, and in an America defined by class inequity, Shepherd makes art about the process of remembering. First collecting images, commodities, and cultural artifacts, then utilizing intuition and abstraction to synthesize them into the paintings and objects, Shepherd is recording his experience of the world. Shepherd has participated in several group shows in Savannah and looks forward to establishing his studio and growing his practice after graduation.
